AMERICAN DISPATCHES.

CANADIANS CHARGED WITH STEALING LOGS.

Officers Being Sent Out to Stop Lumbermen from Crossing the Border—The Swedish Colony of Vermont Being Deserted by Its Inhabitants.

NEW YORK, July 21.—The general business of the Western Union telegraph Company is still received with the proviso "Subject to delay." The work of tracing the circuits and cutting and testing the wires is carried on so rapidly with a large force of men day and night that the officials expect to be able to handle all business as usual on Wednesday.

Blown to Atoms.

NEW YORK, July 21.—A boiler located on Eagle avenue and 149th street exploded this morning. The building was shattered and the explosion set fire to a one story frame barn at 560 Eagle avenue and a two story frame dwelling owned by Chas. Jones. An Italian laborer named Lillo was near the boiler at the time and was struck on the side of the head and the skull badly fractured. Annie Selling was struck with a fragment of the boiler on the ankle, crushing it. Lillo was taken to the Harlem hospital, but it is feared that he cannot live. The buildings in the vicinity were badly damaged. Innumerable panes of glass were broken, a barn burned down and a dwelling badly damaged. The loss is estimated at $25,000.

Masons as Excursionists.

NEW YORK, July 21.—A hundred representatives of the Masonic brotherhood high degree from Mecca Temple, Ancient and Accepted Scotch mystic shrine, with their friends left by the West Shore Railroad at 1 p. m., to-day on their pilgrimage to Yellowstone Park and California. They are to be special guests of the nobles of the Isham Temple, San Francisco and will be absent for a month.

Orphan Asylum Burned.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 21.—At 1:30 p. m. the orphan asylum is on fire. No particulars obtainable as the building is a mile and a half from the city. Between 200 and 300 children are in the building.

A Big Failure.

NEW YORK, July 21.—A. Strews & Sons, dealers in dry goods at 249 and 253 Grand street, made a general assignment with preferences at $10,000.

DESERTING VERMONT.

A Swedish Colonization Scheme of Deserted Farms a Failure.

RUTLAND, Vt., July 21.—The colonization scheme of the Swedish people on the deserted farms of Vermont is not proving a success. Discontent prevails and some of them are removing to the lumber regions of the state upon the Canadian and Maine borders, where they can combine lumbering in the forest and clearing up land for farms. The last family which became occupants of an abandoned farm in the township of Vershire, Orange county, in the early spring has removed to Norton Mills, Essex county, where several timber camps have been established near the Canadian boundary. They expect in this new location to clear land for farming purposes and pay for it with their labor, and support themselves by selling the lumber they cut. Several hundred Swedes have been at work in this territory for a year or more. Gov. Dillingham and A. B. Valentine, the immigration commissioner, leaves for Bennington to-morrow to visit the Swedish settlements in the State, preparatory to making a report to legislature in October. They will endeavor to learn the condition and find a remedy. To people the unsettled portion of the State is still an unsolved problem. Swedish colonization as a farming factor in Vermont is evidently a failure. The lands are productive and farm buildings are in good condition in the settlements that have been made, and the neighbors have given encouragement and a helping hand. The Swedes complain that they cannot find work for their spare days only in harvest time, and having but little money they can't maintain themselves throughout the year or until crops from the land can be sold.

STEALING LOGS.

Canadian Lumbermen Charged with the American Trick of Log stealing.

NEW YORK, July 20.—The Herald's special from St. Paul says: Lumber stealing by Canadians along the northern border of Minnesota, has become so extensive that the Government has concluded to put a stop to it. A large expedition, headed by four agents, will leave Duluth on August 1st and start in a northwesterly direction, its destination being the western portion of Rainy Lake. The four officers of the law and interior department will be instructed to continue their work as far as in their own judgment seems best, and no time is fixed for their return. The expedition was decided upon by the head of the interior and land department after an examination of a report by a special agent, who made a trip along the northern boundary of the state. He reported that on Big and Little Rainy rivers, great quantities of logs were being run to the lake and across Canadian boundary. The logs had been cut from government land. The work was being carried on under direction of Canadian lumber firms and was performed by Canadian halfbreeds, Frenchmen and by some of the dwellers on this side of the line, who were probably not aware that they were engaged in the fraudulent enterprise. The special agent estimated that on the three rivers there were 77,000,000 feet of logs, and perhaps as much more was being gotten away with at other points along the line. An effort will be made to secure this in the name of the government and as soon as the logs are found by the agents and branded with the government stamp which the agents will take with them, they will be held at all hazards.

SPORTING NOTES.

Brief Resume of Sporting Matters Here and Elsewhere.

The James Bay team returned from Nanaimo on Saturday evening, having defeated the Nanaimo team by six runs to three. They were met at the station by a committee consisting of Dr. Davis, Marcus Wolfe and Mr. Davis and escorted to the Occidental Hotel. During their brief visit they were handsomely treated by the Nanaimo team.

The game commenced at two o'clock with the Bays at the bat, and up to the sixth innings the Nanaimos were two runs ahead, and two to one was freely offered that they would win. In the sixth Gouge reached first on a hit, stole second, reached third on Gowen's sacrifice and came home on Hannan's sacrifice. Borthwick got to first on a hit, stole second, and reached home on a passed ball, which enabled Franklin to get to first on his third strike. The score was then three to three. Widdowson reached first on Cheetwood's muffed grounder, and he and Franklin came home on Wishart's timely three-bagger. Lorimer struck out, leaving the score five to three in favor of the Bays; the Nanaimoites failed to score after the fourth innings. In the seventh Gouge reached first on a hit, second on Hannan's sacrifice and home on Gowen's two-bagger. In the eighth and ninth there was no score, leaving the Bays the victors by six runs to three.

Owing to an accident to pitcher Jackson he was unable to play. Great credit is due to Borthwick; he pitched a splendid game, having no less than 13 strike-outs. His batting and the bays fielding was perfect. Gouge's running fly catch was a feature of the game. Franklyn's fly and double play astonished McCluscy, who was on second. The Nanaimo team seem to be very backward in their knowledge of the rules. Cheetwood was at the bat and was hit by the pitcher on the third strike; the umpire declared him out, and for so doing was sat upon by the Nanaimoites, especially the spectators. At another time Widdowson was at the bat and was hit by a pitched ball on the second strike, and because he took his base there was another kick, and two of the Nanaimo team vowed vengeance against the umpire. The Bays speak in high praise of Mr. Voegtle, the Nanaimo catcher. The following is the score:

The Port Townsend baseball club will visit this city and play a return game with the Amities on Saturday afternoon next, the 26th inst. The Caledonian grounds are being placed in good shape for the game and the Amities will be out for practice every evening this week. All members of the Victoria B.B. club are also requested to turn out for practice in view of games with the James Bays and the Tacoma amateur club. A game with the latter will probably be arranged for Saturday the 9th proximo.

FOOTBALL.

The game of football played at the Caledonian grounds on Saturday evening between the Thistles and the United Scots for the badges offered by the Caledonian Society was keenly contested, and resulted in another draw. The United Scots had eight shots on goal, but were unable to score. The game was in favor of the Scots.

FOR THE WORLD'S CHAMPIONSHIP.

BOSTON, July 21.—The veteran swimmer of Great Britain and the holder of the swimming championship of the British Isles, J. B. Johnson, recently arrived here, has succeeded in making a match with Prof. Donaldson to swim ten miles for $1000 a side over an ocean course. The course of Coney island will probably be selected.

CRICKET.

The Junior Beresfords will play the pupils of Rev. J. Wastie Green on Wednesday at the Hill.

THE EFFECT OF THE BILL.

Silver at a Very High Figure—Demonetization the Topic.

LONDON, July 21.—The price for bar silver to day is 50¼d per ounce. This is the highest price ever reached since the changes made in the value of the precious metal throughout the world by the passing of the silver bills. Indian exchanges and the Chinese trade are especially affected because silver is the especially currency used. The remonetization of silver is again becoming the chief topic of conversation in Europe.

HOME AND FOREIGN.

FRANK SPENCER THE MURDERER HUNG AT KAMLOOPS.

Lemieux's Body Found in the Ottawa River—The Guatemalan Government Denies the Reports About the War in Central America—Poor Crops in England.

LONDON, July 21.—The Duke of Cambridge inspected the Grenadier Guards to-day previous to their departure. He made a brief address in which he stated that he hoped they would behave better abroad. The guard start for Bermuda to-morrow.

No War.

LONDON, July 21.—The Guatemalan minister to Paris received a dispatch from his government denying the statement published in the morning papers to the effect that hostilities had broken out between San Salvador and Guatemala. According to his advices war had not been declared nor has the San Salvador frontier been crossed.

A Mysterious Wonder.

BERLIN, July 21.—A tragedy surrounded with mystery was perpetrated in the Thiergarten park near Goldfish lake, early this morning. The body of Marie Wender, the pretty wife of a postoffice official, was discovered with a bullet wound in the left breast and the throat cut. There is no clue to the murderer. The husband of the woman was away from home much of the time and it is supposed that the couple didn't live happily together, and that Mrs. Wender had a lover. The husband has not been seen since the crime was discovered.

Smoking on Sabbath.

BERLIN, July 21.—Two prominent Hebrews of this city, Dr. Abel and District Rabbi Morgantheim, are on trial before the synagogue committee on a charge of smoking cigarette on Saturday, the Jewish Sabbath.

European Crops Will be Poor.

LONDON, July 21.—Reports received daily from abroad by telegraph respecting the general crop prospects are bad. In France, especially in the central and northern departments, cold nights and constantly wet days are bringing about disastrous results. In Germany, Switzerland and Belgium the constant rain and low temperature are seriously affecting wheat, but in Austria-Hungary the harvest looks favorable and there are promises of good yields. Telegrams from Odessa, Russia, announces that continuous wet weather threatens to injure all the crops, especially the cereals.

Milan's Debts.

BELGRADE, July 20.—Ex-King Milan's continued stay here is explained by the knowledge that he cannot return to his usual and preferred haunts owing to the attachments placed on his effects. Twenty million francs and Servia is the only safe spot for him to rest. It is now known that his recent outburst against the Government was the result of the regent's refusal to make him an advance on his annuity of 250,000 francs.

CAPITAL NOTES.

Doings at Ottawa Briefly Chronicled—Gas Not Dutiable.

Special to the TIMES.]

OTTAWA, Ont., July 21.—The body of Lemeux was found in the Ottawa river this morning by a diver. It was embedded in the sawdust which at that point is several feet thick.

The company lying pipes from Welland to Buffalo, to supply the latter city with natural gas, will not have to pay duty, as the United States has declared that natural gas is not dutiable.

A portrait is to be painted of Chief Justice Ritchie by E. Paterson, to be hung in the Supreme Court room.

THE GALLOWS.

Frank Spencer Hanged This Morning for a Murder Committed in 1887.

KAMLOOPS, July 21.—Frank Spencer was hanged in the gaol yard here this morning for the murder of Peter Foster on May 1st, 1887. The condemned man walked calmly to the scaffold. At four minutes past eight the bolt was drawn and Spencer died without a struggle.

The murder for which Spencer suffered to-day was committed on the 20th of May, 1887, and occurred over a drunken quarrel with the victim, a French Canadian named Peter Foster, who was about 22 years of age, being shot by Spencer. The murderer escaped at the time, and was at large for nearly three years, being captured in Vancouver last spring.

HUDSON BAY COMPANY.

The Annual Accounts—The Land Sales for the Year—Dividend Declared.

The following is the report of the Hudson Bay Co., submitted to the meeting in London on the 15th inst.:

The governor and committee have now to submit to the proprietors the annual accounts of the company, and to express their regret that the results of the trade have been seriously affected by the exceptionally heavy fall in the price of furs which took place at the last spring sales.

The following table shows that the decline in prices extended to every description of fur brought to market by the company, except fur seal and sea otter, of which the company obtain only very small quantities. Beaver declined 1 per cent.; other descriptions declined 5 per cent.; fisher, declined 20 per cent.; fox silver, declined 10 per cent.; fox cross, declined 15 per cent.; fox blue, declined 40 per cent.; fox red, declined 15 per cent.; fox white, declined 20 per cent.; bear, declined 33 per cent.; lynx, declined 50 per cent.; martin, declined 30 per cent.; mink, declined 30 per cent.; muskrat, declined 12½ per cent.; musk ox, declined 50 per cent.; ermine, declined 40 per cent.; badger, declined 33 per cent.; raccoon, declined 5 per cent.; skunk, declined 15 per cent.; wolf, declined 5 per cent.; wolverin, declined 10 per cent. This great fall was mainly due to the mildness of the past winter, and to changes in fashion which reduced the demand for most of the finer kinds of furs. The profits of outfit 1888 have thus declined to £40,819 7s. 10d., as compared with £93,074 5s. 5d., for outfit 1887.

In accordance with the resolution adopted by the shareholders in June, 1887, the commissioned officers are entitled to the guaranteed sum of £200 per share for outfit 1888, amounting to £19,800 now charged in the Company's profit and loss account for the year ending 31st May, 1890, leaving net profits amounting to £24,816 14s. 8d.

It will be observed that fuller details than heretofore are given in the trading account. As mentioned last year, instructions were sent to the officers abroad to make certain changes in the mode in which the accounts are kept at the principal depots and stations, but owing to the difficulty of communication from the peculiar circumstances of the country, sufficient time has not yet elapsed to admit of these changes being fully carried into effect.

The Company's marine insurance fund continues to show satisfactory results. After crediting the amount of premiums on insurance undertaken by the Company, and interest on the amount of the fund, the sum of £2,341 19s. 14d. has been transferred to profit and loss, leaving the balance at the same amount as last year—namely, £50,000.

The governor and committee have carefully considered the best mode of dealing with the balance of the land account, now amounting to £43,766 15s. 2d., and believing that it would be for the benefit of the company and convenience of the shareholders that the proceeds of land sales should be distributed as dividends, instead of being treated, as heretofore, as a return of capital, and written off the share certificates, they have taken the opinion of counsel, and are advised that it is quite competent to the company to make the change. Acting on this opinion, the governor and committee have transferred the sum of £43,766 15s. 2d. from the land account to the credit of the general profit and loss account, bringing the balance of the latter to £109,864 0s. 5d., out of which they recommend a dividend of 14s. per share, which will absorb £70,000, and leave £39,864 0s. 5d. to be carried forward.

The land account now submitted shows the cash receipts and disbursements for the year ending 31st March, 1890. The receipts amount to £37,071 8s., as compared with £39,488 8s. 9d., for the year ending 31st March, 1889, while the charges show a reduction of £5,940, arising from the absence of any payment this year for the Company's share of Government surveys, and from a considerable saving in the expenses of management.

The following table, showing the amount of land surveyed by the Dominion, may prove interesting, as shareholders are aware that the Company are entitled to one-twentieth of the lands so surveyed:—Previous to June, 1873, 4,792,322 acres; in 1874, 4,227,864 acres; in 1875, 665,000 acres; in 1876, 420,507 acres; in 1877, 237,021 acres; in 1878, 806,926 acres; in 1879, 1,130,482 acres; in 1880, 4,472,000 acres; in 1881, 8,147,000 acres; in 1882, 9,460,000 acres; in 1883, 27,000,000 acres; in 1884, 6,936,000 acres; in 1885, 391,660 acres; in 1886, 1,279,010 acres; in 1887, 642,710 acres; in 1888, 1,131,840 acres; in 1889, 516,960 acres; total, 71,226,972 acres.

The sales of farm lands and town lots by the Company during the past year have been as follows:

Farm lands—38,720 acres (Averaging $3.15 per acre.)			$120,630
Town lots—
Victoria, B. C.	2	lots	$21,200
Winnipeg	1	"	1,500
Portage la Prairie	1	"	50
Fort Qu'Appelle	3	"	250
Edmonton	11	"	1,600
Sat Portage	23	"	13,010
Rosemount	25	"	1,175
Newdale	1	"	25
Millwood	1	"	125
Nipigon	1	"	50
			39,135
Total			$157,765

as compared with $187,974 for the year ending 31st March, 1889. The sales after July last were unfavorably affected by a partial failure of the crops, in consequence of the drought which prevailed in Manitoba and the Northwest Territory. Deducting sales cancelled, the total quantity of farm land sold by the company to the end of March last was 226,292 acres. The unpaid instalments on running sales at that date amounted to $495,603, of which $143,830 were in arrear, and $351,773 not due. The sales in April and May, since the accounts were closed, amount to 4315 acres for $25,820. Encouraging advices have recently been received with respect to the prospects of a good harvest from a largely extended area now under crop in the Northwest portion of Canada.

In conclusion, with reference to the question of converting the shares, the governor and committee have to state that, having regard to the best interests of the Company, they continue opposed to any scheme which has for its principle the writing up of the capital by placing an imaginary value upon the Company's land. But to the principle of duplicating shares, recently sanctioned by a committee of the House of Commons, the board will offer no opposition.

If, therefore, without increasing the capital, the shareholders desire that a plan should be prepared for duplicating the shares by the issue of one preferred and one deferred share for each ordinary share in the Company, the governor and committee will be prepared to draw up such a scheme, and to take the proper steps to obtain the necessary amendments in the charter. On behalf of the committee,

DONALD A. SMITH, Governor.

When the next morning breaks chill and pallid, a change has come in the aspect of affairs. During the earliest hour of the dawn the red light of a light draught river boat startled the outlying pickets down stream, and the Far West answering the muffled hail from shore, responded, through the medium of a mate's stentorian tones, "News that'll rout you fellows out." The sun is barely peeping over the jagged outline of the eastern hills when, with Rayner's entire battalion aboard, she is steaming again down stream, with orders to land at the mouth of the Sweet Root. There the four companies will disembark in readiness to join the rest of the regiment.

All day long again the wagon train twists and wriggles through an aggregation of Les Mauvaises Terres. It is a tedious, trying march for Hull's little command of troopers—all that is now left to guard the train. The captain is constantly out on the exposed flank, eagerly scanning the rough country to the south, and expectant any moment of an attack from that direction. He and his men, as well as the horses, mules and teamsters, are fairly tired out when at nightfall they park the wagons in a big semicircle, with the broad river forming a shining chord to the arc of white canvas. All the live stock are safely herded within the inclosure; a few reliable soldiers are posted well out to the south and east to guard against surprise, and the veteran Sergt. Clancy is put in command of the sentries. The captain gives strict injunctions as to the importance of these duties, for he is far from easy in his mind over the situation. The Rifles, he knows, are over in the valley of the Sweet Root. The steamer with Rayner's men is tied up at the bank some five miles below, around the bend. The —th are far off to the northward across the Elk, as ordered, and must be expected on the morrow to make for the old Indian "ferry" opposite Battle Butte. The main body of the Sioux are reported farther down stream, but he feels it in his bones that there are numbers of them within signal, and he wishes with all his heart the —th were here. Still, the general was sure he would stir up war parties on the other shore. Individually, he has had very little luck in scouting during the summer, and he cannot help wishing he were with the rest of the regiment. Meanwhile, Rayne appears, refreshed and debonair as though he had not been working like a horse all day. His voice sounds so full of cheer and life that Hull looks up smilingly.

"Well, youngster, you seem to love this frontier life."

"Every bit of it, captain. I was cut out for the army, as father thought."

"We used to talk it over a good deal in the old days when I was stationed around Washington," answers Hull. "Your father was the warmest friend I had in civil circles, and he made it very pleasant for me. How little we thought it would be my luck to have you for quartermaster!"

"The fellows seemed struck all of a heap in the Rifles at the idea of your applying for me, captain. I was ready to swear it was all on father's account, and would have told them so, only Rayner happened to be the first man to tackle me on the subject, and he was so crusty about it I kept the whole thing to myself rather than give him any satisfaction."

"Larry, my boy, I'm no preacher, but I want to be the friend to you your father was to me. You are full of enthusiasm and life and spirits, and you love the army ways and have made yourself very popular with the youngsters, but I'm afraid you are too careless and independent where the seniors are concerned. Rayner is a good soldier, and you show him very scant respect, I'm told."

"Well, he's such an interfering fellow. They will all tell you I'm respectful enough to—to the captain I like"——

"That's just it, Lawrence. So long as you like a man, your manner is what it should be. What a young soldier ought to learn, is to be courteous and respectful to senior officers whether he likes them or not. It costs an effort sometimes, but it tells. You never know what trouble you are laying up for yourself in the army by backing against men you don't like. They may not be in position to resent it at the time, but the time is mighty apt to come when they will be, and then you are helpless."

"Why, Capt. Hull, I don't see it that way at all. It seems to me that so long as an officer attends to his duty minds his own business, and behaves like a gentleman, no one can harm him, especially when all the good fellows of the regiment are his friends, as they are mine, I think, in the Rifles."

"Ah, Hayne, it is a hard thing to teach a youngster that there are men who find it very easy to make their junior's lives a burden to them, and without overstepping a regulation. It is harder yet to teach youngsters that friends they may have a good deal like friends out of it—one only has to get into serious trouble to find how few they are. God grant you may never have to learn it, my boy, as many another has had to, by sharp experience! Now we must get a good night's rest. You sleep like a log, and I can only take cat naps. Confound this money! How I wish I could get rid of it!"

"Where do you keep it to-night?"

"Right here in my saddlebags under my head. Nobody can touch them that I do not wake; and my revolver is here under the blanket. Hold on! Let's see a look and see if everything is all right." He holds a little camp lantern over the bag, opens the flap, and peers in. "Yes, all serene. I got a big hunk of green sealing wax from the paymaster and sealed it all up in one package with the memorandum list inside. It's all safe so far, even to the hunk of sealing wax. —What is it, sergeant?"

A tall, soldierly, dark eyed trooper appears at the doorway of the little tent, and raises his gauntleted hand in salute. His language, though couched in the phraseology of the soldier, tells both in choice of words and in the intonation of every phrase that he is a man whose antecedents have been far different from those of the majority of the rank and file:

"Will the captain permit me to take my horse and those of three or four more men outside the corral? Sergt. Clancy says he has no authority to allow it. We have found a patch of excellent grass, sir, and there is hardly any left inside. I will sleep by the picket pin, and one of us will keep awake all the time, if the captain will permit."

"How far away is it, sergeant?"

"Not quite two weeks, sir, close to the river bank east of us."

"Very well. Send Sergt. Clancy here, and I'll give the necessary orders."

The soldier quietly salutes, and disappears in the gathering darkness.

"That's what I like about that man Gower," says the Captain, after a moment's silence. "He is always looking out for his horse. If he were not such a gambler and rake he would make a splendid first sergeant. Fine looking fellow isn't he?"

"Yes, sir. That is a face that one couldn't well forget. Who was the other sergeant you overhauled for getting fleeced by those sharps at the cantonment?"

"Clancy? He's on guard to-night. A very different character."

"I don't know him by sight as yet. Well, good-night, sir. I'll take myself off, and go to my own tent."

Daybreak again, and far to the east the sky is all ablaze. The mist is creeping from the silent shallows under the banks, but all is life and vim along the shore. With cracking whip, tugging trace, sonorous blasphemy, and ringing shout, the long train is whirling ahead almost at the run. All is athrill with exhilaration, and the keen air, sparkling sun eyes gleam with eager light and peer searchingly from every rise far over to the southeast, where stands a tumbling heap of hills against the lightening sky. "Off there, are they?" says a burly trooper, dismounting hastily to tighten up the "cinch" of his weather beaten saddle. "We can make it quick enough, soon as we get rid of these blasted wagons." And, swinging into saddle again, he goes cantering down the slope, his charger snorting with exhilaration in the keen morning air.

Before dawn a courier has galloped into camp, bearing a despatch from the commanding officer of the Rifles. It says but few words, but they are full of meaning: "We have found a big party of hostiles. They are in strong position, and have us at disadvantage. Rayner with his four companies is hurrying to us. Leave all wagons with the boat under guard, and come with every horse and man you can bring."

Before 7 o'clock the wagons are packed close along the bank beside the Far West, and Hull, with all the men he can muster—some fifty—is trotting ahead on the trail of Rayner's battalion. With him rides Mr. Hayne, eager and enthusiastic. Before 10 o'clock, far up along the slopes they see the blue line of skirmishers, and the knot of reserves farther down, all at a stand. In ten minutes they ride with foaming reins in behind a low ridge on which, flat on their faces and cautiously peering over the crest, some hundred infantrymen are disposed. Others, officers and file closers, are moving to and fro in rear.

They are of Rayner's battalion. Farther back, down in a ravine, a dozen forms are outstretched upon the turf, and others are bending over them, ministering to the needs of those who are not past help already. Several officers crowd around the leading horsemen and Hull orders: "Halt, dismount and loosen girths." The grave faces show that the infantry has had poor luck, and the situation is summarized in a few words. The Indians are in force occupying the ravines and ridges opposite them and confronting the six companies farther over to the west. Two attacks have been made, but the Indian fire swept every approach, and both were unsuccessful. Several soldiers were shot dead, others severely wounded. Lieut. Warren's leg is shattered below the knee; Capt. Blount is killed.

"Where's Rayner?" asks Hull, with grave face.

"Just gone off with the chief to look it over. Back on the other side. The colonel is hopping. He is bound to have those Indians out of there or drop trying. They'll be back in a minute. The general had a rousing fight with Dull Knife's people down the river last evening. You missed it again, Hull; all the —th were there but F and K, and, of course, old Firewater wants to make as big a hit here."

"The —th fighting down the river last night?" asks Hull, in amaze.

"Yes—swept clean round them and ran 'em into the stream, they say. I wish we had them where we could use 'em at all. You don't get the glimpse of a head, even; but all those rocks are lined with the beggars. Damn them!" says the adjutant, feelingly.

"We'll get our chance here, then," replies Hull, reflectively. "I'll creep up and take a look at it. Take my horse, orderly."

He is back in two minutes, graver than before, but his bearing is spirited and firm. Hayne watches him with kindling eye.

"You'll take me in with you when you charge?" he asks.

"It is no place to charge there. The ground is all cut up with ravines and gullies, and they've got a cross fire that sweeps it clean. We'll probably go in on the other flank; it's more open there. Here comes the chief now."

Two officers come riding hastily around a projecting point of the slope and spur at rapid gait towards the spot where the cavalry have dismounted and are breathing their horses. There is hardly time for salutations. A gray headed, keen eyed, florid faced old soldier is the colonel, and he is snapping with electricity, apparently.

"This way, Hull. Come right here, and I'll show you what you are to do." And, followed by Rayner, Hull and Hayne, the chief rides sharply over to the extreme left of the position and points to the frowning ridge across the intervening swale:

"There, Hull, there are twenty or thirty of the rascals in there who got a flank fire on us when we attack on our side. What I want you to do is to mount your men, let them draw pistol and be all ready. Rayner, here, will line the ridge to keep them down in front. I'll go back to the right and order the attack at once. The moment we begin and you hear our shots, you give a yell, and charge full tilt across there, so as to drive out those fellows in that ravine. We can do the rest. Do you understand?"

"I understand, colonel; but—is it your order that I attempt to charge mounded across that ground?"

"Why, certainly! It isn't the best in the world, but you can make it. They can't do very much damage to your men before you reach them. It's got to be done; it's the only way."

"Very good, sir; that ends it!" is the calm, soldierly reply; and the colonel goes bounding away.

A moment later the troop is in saddle, eager, wiry, bronzed fellows every one, and the revolvers are in hand and being carefully examined. Then Capt. Hull signals to Hayne, while Rayner and three or four soldiers sit in silence, watching the man who is to lead the charge. He dismounts at a little knoll a few feet away, tosses his reins to the trumpeter and steps to his saddle bags. Hayne, too, dismounts.

Taking his watch and chain from the pocket of his hunting shirt, he opens the saddle bag on the near side and takes therefrom two packets—one heavily sealed—which he hands to Hayne.

"In case I don't come back, you know what to do with these—as I told you last night."

"For me to go with you, sir, and share your fate, captain?"

"Yes, Hayne. You can't go with us. Hark! There they go at the right. Are the packages all right?"

Hayne, with stunned faculties, thinking only of the charge he longs to make—not of the one he has to keep—replies he knows not what. There is a ringing bugle call far off among the rocks to the westward; a rousing cheer; a rattling volley. Rayner springs off to his men on the hillside. Hull spurs in front of his eager troop, holding high his pistol in hand:

"Now, men, follow till I drop; and then keep ahead. Come on!"

There is a furious spatter of hoofs a rush of excited steeds up the gentle slope a glad outburst of cheers as they sweep across the ridge and out of sight, then the clamor and yell of frantic battle; and when at last it dies away, the riflers are panting over the hard won position and shaking hands with some few silent cavalrymen. They have carried the ridge, captured the migrating village, squaws, ponies, travois, and papooses; their "long Toms" have sent many a stalwart warrior to the mythical hunting grounds, and the peppery colonel's triumph is complete.

But Lawrence Hayne, with all the light gone from his brave young face, stands mutely looking down upon the stiffening frame of his father's old friend, and his, who lies shot through the heart.

ERRORS OF YOUNG AND OLD

Mesmeric Influence in Business.

"It is surprising the amount of mesmeric influence some men possess," remarked an expert bookkeeper. "Some time ago in New York I had to go over the books of a firm that had dissolved to straighten out matters. When I started the balance sheet showed $25,000 in favor of partner No. 1. Well, for days and days we worked on the books. It was the most tiresome work I ever undertook. Partner No. 1 was a remarkable man, persuasive and affable in demeanor. Sometimes he would come in to go over some of the figures with me. 'These are not right,' he would say. I knew they were and would say so. Then he would start to argue with me, and I felt myself giving way. Finally I would have to leave the room. In the hall I would walk up and down, saying to myself, 'You're a fool. You know your figures are right.' When he had departed I would recover and be able to go on. But all the while I felt the man's subtle influence. I struggled against it. 'Do your duty,' I kept saying to myself.

"Finally, when I reached the result, I turned pale. Partner No. 1 was short $150,000. He came in. 'Well?' he said. 'There is the result,' I answered. He looked at it and never winced. 'You are sure the figures are right?' 'Yes,' I said. I struggled desperately and this time he was not able to conquer me. 'Well,' he said, 'if those figures are correct, the money will be paid.'

"And he did pay it, every cent, although it took all he had. You would be astonished to know who that man was. I attribute his marvelous success to his magnetic personality. Every one with whom he comes in contact feels it. He associates with many men in great undertakings, but he always gets the kernels while they get the shells, and, moreover, everything is done as per contract. Year by year I watch this man's career with added surprise and always congratulate myself that I was able to withstand him. He is the only man I ever met who could for the time being make me doubt my mathematical accuracy."—Detroit Tribune.

"Horium," the Fatal 63.

Certain years in the life of man have been, from great antiquity, supposed to have a peculiar importance, and to be liable to singular vicissitudes in his health and fortunes. Where or how this belief originated is unknown, but it is supposed to have been founded on the teachings of Pythagoras. The well known notice of the climacteric year—63—supposed to be particularly dangerous to men of that age, in a letter of Augustus Cæsar, evinces its prevalence among the Romans. Some astrological writers have called the sixty-third year man's "horium," because of a mythical notion that it was or is fatal to great men.

The sole cause of its blighting influence is supposed to revert to the fact that it is a multiple of the 7 and 9, both of which are mystical numbers. It is a remarkable fact that all nations attach particular importance to 7 or any multiple of that figure. Thus at 14, twice seven, the male and female are supposed to have arrived at puberty; at 21, three sevens, the male becomes "of age," while many writers, Aristotle in particular, fix 35, five sevens, as the height of bodily vigor and 49 as the year of maximum mental activity. At the age of 63, when man is nine times seven years of age, the most trivial diseases are likely to cause the death of the most robust old man, while the ten sevens (70) have been ascribed as the limit of his earthly career.—St. Louis Republic.

Antiquity of Football.

The game of football was well known in England prior to 1175, but it was never regarded with favor by the law, and in the reign of Edward III (1365) an act was passed forbidding it. During the reign of Richard II (1388) a similar law was enacted, and again, under the Scotch kings, James I (1424) and James II (1457), it was "decreeted and ordained that the football and golfe be utterly cryed down and not to be used." In 1471 James III and in 1491 James IV passed similar statutes. James I of England also oppposed it in his "Basilikon-Doron." He writes: "From this court I debarre all rough and violent exercise, as the football, meeter for lamming than making able the users thereof." And in the reign of Elizabeth, his predecessor, a true bill was found against sixteen persons for playing the unlawful game. In Cromwell's days a youth was indicted for playing the game.—Canada Law Journal.

About Paper.

A new mill for the manufacture of paper from moss has been recently established in Sweden. Paper of different thickness and pasteboard made of it have already been shown, the latter even in sheets three-quarters of an inch thick. It is as hard as wood and can be easily painted and polished. It has all the good qualities, but none of the defects, of wood. The pasteboard can be used for door and window frames, architectural ornaments and all kinds of furniture. The ceiling of the assembly chamber at Albany, N. Y., is made of papier-mache. It is a model of of its kind, and appears so like marble as to deceive the most expert eye. The latest idea is to use paper instead of wood for lead pencils, by using a patent preparation by which it can be cut as easily as the softest wood.—St. Louis Stationer.

Early Locomotives.

Vienna Day of the competition—Oct. 6, 1829—the "Rocket" was the only locomotive ready, and the trial of the "Novelty" was postponed until the 11th, when the pipe from the forcing pump burst and brought it to a speedy termination. This was repaired in the course of the day, and the engine made several trips in the absence of the judges. On its trial before the judges, on the next day, a "green joint" yielded, and the choleric Ericsson, con. vhat too hastily, smarting under what he considered some unfairness, withdrew his engine, and the award was given to Stephenson, who had alone "fulfilled every stipulated condition."—Col. W. C. Church in Scribner.

Tiger Stories.

Lady Dufferin, in her book, "Our Viceregal Life in India," tells of a tiger which in nine months killed twenty-three men. The whole neighborhood entreated an English sportsman, who happened to be in the vicinity, to kill the terrible man eater. The sportsman spent twenty-four hours in a cage, built so that the sportsman within may shoot at the tiger through the bars, and yet be protected from his attack. A companion joined him after he had been twelve hours in the cage, and they both watched twelve hours more, but no tiger appeared.

Then the two men went to sleep. When they woke they found the tiger had walked round the cage, for his footprints were plainly to be seen through the bars.

This same sportsman hunted one day for a tiger, in a jungle so thick that he could see nothing. But he felt sure that a tiger was close to him all the time. At last he made his men examine the ground, and they found tracks which disclosed that the tiger had been following them all day.—Youth's Companion.

The Washerwomen of the Treasury.

It takes 500 towels a day to supply the treasury department, and one month in the neighborhood of 15,000 towels were used. A great part of the treasury work is dirty work, and every room has a new towel every day. The washing of these towels is done by women who are paid thirty cents a dozen and who are charged with every towel they take away. If any are lost they have to pay for them, and Uncle Sam watches the corners mighty close in all of his business.—Washington Letter.

A Warning.

MR. EDITOR,—It is a well-known fact that the majority of people are inclined to look upon a cold in the head as a matter of little importance—involving at the most only a temporary inconvenience. No more disastrous mistake was ever made. The neglected cold in the head is the source of the catarrhal affections with which about seven-tenths of the people of this country are afflicted, and catarrh itself is too often the preliminary stage to consumption and death. The symptoms of catarrh are manifold, but among them may be mentioned, offensive breath; dull, oppressive headache; offensive droppings from the nostrils into the throat and bronchial tubes; deafness or partial deafness; constant hawking and spitting; weak and watery eyes; a hacking cough and feeling of general debility; ringing in the ears and frequent dizziness. These are but a few of the more general symptoms, and those who experience them should lose no time in applying a remedy. Delays are proverbially dangerous, and in the case of this too prevalent disease may lead to death. We offer Nasal Balm to the public as a positive cure for cold in the head and for catarrh in all its forms and stages. Nasal Balm has been tested in thousands of cases, and the testimonials in our possession prove that it is all we claim for it. It has cured other sufferers, it will cure you. It is easy to use, pleasant and agreeable and does not require a douche, or any torturing instrument to apply it. Give it a trial and be convinced of its great efficacy. Sold by all dealers or sent post free on receipt of price 50c. for small or $1 for large size bottles by addressing Fulford & Co., Brockville, Ont. daw

THE TIMES P. & P. COMPANY,

THE MINISTER OF EDUCATION SO-CALLED AND THE TEACHERS.

Honest JOHN may succeed in making himself believe that his failure to show up at the Teachers' Institute was justified on account of the lateness of the hour upon which the invitation to be present was received. The public, however, will scarcely fall into his way of thinking. "Honest JOHN's crankyness, when his wishes are thwarted, is so well known that he might pile Pelion on Ossa in the shape of excuses, wring in every member of the Opposition, in fact, as affording a precedent for his conduct and still the public would smile incredulously. The TIMES, therefore, has no need to enter in a controversy with the Colonist with respect to the motives which govern "Honest JOHN" when he is cross. The Minister of Education so-called has no use for "pedagogues" who are not tuft hunters, or who do not carry the same fungus growth on their backs that he does himself. And above all, does it try "Honest JOHN's" Christian fortitude to meet Mr. MUIR. As between his Satanic Majesty and Mr. MUIR the general understanding is that the Minister of Education had sooner discuss caloric with the former for an hour than "daily marking" with the latter for sixty seconds. It is to be regretted that the predilections of the Minister of Education so called, are so woefully perverted, but since they are, and since he will not heed the exhortations of the TIMES to conform to modern ideas and usages, it can only say amen, and await the action of that avenging Nemesis, the perfidious News-Advertiser.

TERRITORIAL DISTRIBUTION.

The discussion anent the cession of Heligoland still goes on, and it is suggested by the S. F. Call that the fashion may grow out of the transaction that will alter the map of the world. It may lead statesmen to reconsider the doctrine expounded by the Senate during General GRANT's administration that the possession of non-configuous territory is a source of weakness to a nation with no redeeming advantage. When the British government evacuated the Ionian Islands 26 years ago, the controversy over the value of distant colonies was exhaustively waged.

On the one hand, observes our contemporary, the progressive school of statesmen argued that the Ionian Islands, which were a British protectorate, were a source of expense, annoyance and danger to England, and possessed neither commercial nor strategic value; on the other hand the Tories argued that the more widely the British flag was floated the greater the prestige and power of the empire. The former prevailed. The islands were handed over to Greece, and it may safely be said that the transfer has not cost Great Britain a dollar, nor has it impaired its strenght. Fourteen years afterward, however, the Tories having regained power, the British policy was reversed, and, in compliance with a bargain with the Porte, Great Britain annexed the island of Cyprus. It may be noted, in illustration of the character of the ex-Chancellor of Germany, that when England evacuated the Ionian Islands Bismarck declared that the event implied the beginning of the decline and fall of England's greatness, and he warmly commended Disraeli for occupying Cyprus as a base of operations against Egypt. He must regard the proposed cession of Heligoland as a fresh proof of British decay.

In so far as the question of Heligoland is concerned, we should suppose, judging of its location and topography, that it is a bit of real estate that England has done well to get rid of. That, however, she must continue to hold divers outlying points for strategic purposes is illustrated in the cases of Bermuda and the Bahamas, which during the war of the Rebellion were used as bases of operation by the Confederate privateers against the commerce of their antagonists. England similarly placed would be raised. She does not want to hold any more barren islands than is necessary, but she wants to make sure and hold enough. She cannot afford to give a possibly powerful and active enemy any percentage in the way of coaling stations and places of refuge in the coming struggle for the commercial supremacy of the world.

THE MINER'S VIEW OF THE GOVERNMENT.

The Kootenay Miner, discussing the result of the late election, says:

"The recent election in this Province demonstrated the fact that the present Government is not in accord with the majority of the people, although retained in power by the return of a majority of its supporters. In proof of this the total vote given candidates who avowed themselves supporters of Mr. Robson is found to be less than that given candidates who avowed themselves as either opposition or independent. While the returns available at this out-of-the-way place are incomplete, yet a tabulation shows that the Government candidates received the support of 4294 electors as against 3478 for the combined Opposition and independent candidates. That the Government is retained in power is not surprising when pocket boroughs like Cariboo, Esquimalt, Victoria district, and Cowichan, with a total vote of less than 700, return nine members to Vancouver's two, with a total vote of 1500 odd; or nine to Westminster district's three, with a total vote of nearly 1000.

"That the Opposition was not returned is clearly because of this system of allowing "safe" districts, like Cariboo and Cowichan, a greater representation than "unsafe" ones, like Kootenay and Westminster. West Kootenay polled nearly as many votes as Cariboo, yet it will have but one vote in the Assembly, while Cariboo has three. East Kootenay polled 294 votes to Cowichan's 190 odd; yet the latter has two votes to East Kootenay's one. West Kootenay is almost solid against the Robson Government; and that Government has but few supporters, aside from officeholders and coerced "work-train" gangs, in East Kootenay.

This feeling of opposition is based on a belief that the Robson Government is time serving; that it has no idea of the wants of the people at large; that its acts are always controlled by the small self-seeking element—an element that can be found in every district in the Province. Aside from Mr. Robson, no member of the ministry has even average ability."

SENOR PIERRA AGAIN.

A week or so ago, there appeared in this journal a letter of Senor PIERRA's, a member of the Pan-American Congress, in which he expressed his opinion of certain public men in language more piquant than diplomatic. Senor ROMERO, the Mexican Minister, has seen fit to reply to the charges of Senor PIERRA, and as might have been expected the latter is made to shine a veritable sore head. Senor PIERRA it seems is a New York merchant, who so soon as the South American delegates arrived went with them upon all of their excursions and ingratiated himself with them to such an extent that when the conference was assembled his name was presented for election as Secretary of the Spanish American delegates. Senor ROMERO says:

Senor Pierra accepted the pay of the United States government, of which he became an employee as soon as he was made secretary, and then violated the trust reposed in him by publishing matter in a foreign paper derogatory to the United States and to its officials. Senor Pierra, he says, imagined that he was in the position of a delegate to the conference, and it offended his pride that he had to transact routine business with Mr. Blaine through the medium of W. E. Curtis. He sent his resignation in to the executive committee, alleging as his reasons for resigning that he was not treated with enough courtesy and was not given enough help of a sufficiently good character and that the salary he was receiving, $10 a day was inadequate. Senor Romero explained that the salary was as much as several assistant secretaries of state receive and promised to try to remedy the defect of inadequate help. Senor Pierra wrote in reply that he would allow him to serve for nothing. This was refused, and eventually the resignation was accepted, though Senor Romero did all in his power to prevent it.

But it is not necessary to enter further into the details of Senor ROMERO's defence, and indeed we should not have alluded to the matter at all only that in an article on the subject at the time we took the ground that Senor PIERRA was either in the hands of BLAINE's political enemies or was a sore head. The rejoinder of Senor ROMERO bears us out.

NATIONALIST CLUBS.

A new force is making itself felt in American politics. In all the States of the Union organizations have been or are being formed under the name of "Nationalist Clubs." The doctrine of EDWARD BELLAMY, so graphically set forth in "Looking Backward," is the basis of the principles on which these clubs are founded, and what is more remarkable still, among the members are men who stand high in public estimation. The Springfield Republican is authority for the statement that the Bellamy Nationalists now number fifty thousand members, and that on the formation of the 21st District Club last Tuesday night such men as Rev. Dr. E. COSTA, Rev. S. G. RAYMOND, Prof. DANIEL DE LEON and THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN took a leading part. In their declaration of principles the Nationalists point out:

"The principle of competition is simply the application of the brutal law of the survival of the strongest and the most cunning. Therefore, so long as competition continues to be the ruling factor of our industrial system, the highest development of the individual cannot be reached, for loftiest aims of humanity cannot be realized."

Here we have ground taken precisely opposite to that of DARWIN in his enumeration of "natural selection," or "survival of the fittest." These socialists seem to recognize the naturalness of the Darwinian dictum, but they propose to upset it by the adoption of certain artificial laws. The grand object in so doing is to mitigate the stress of individualism. Socialism once set on foot a relief is offered to the brain worker as well as the hand worker.

The socialism of BELLAMY, it has been pointed out by competent critics, will lead to the decline of the individual energy inseparable from development. HERBERT SPENCER has denounced it as the "coming slavery." The American Nationalists however, do not share this belief, or if they do they regard it preferable to the wear and tear of mind and muscle peculiar to the existing social conditions. Bellamyism is bound to grow. Men are getting tired of a struggle in which the prizes are so difficult of attainment and which at the best are secured only by the few. What man after having devoted his best days to a struggle for a competence only to find himself in a fair way to be buried at the public expense, will not turn to a system in which the brutal law of the survival of the fittest is reversed.

THOSE FALSE TELEGRAMS.

TO THE EDITOR:—During the past few days I have been stopped repeatedly in the streets by sealing men and others interested in the trade, and accused of being the perpetrator of the nonsensical exaggerated reports that have for the last two months been going the rounds among American newspapers concerning Behring sea matters. Now, sir, I wish to state that if I have erred at all in my telegraphic news it has been on the side of tameness rather than otherwise, and that not only during the present season, but those of last year also, I have most carefully refrained from one single word of exaggeration or false coloring. I quote the following lines from the London Telegraph of the 14th June, which I think will bear out my assertion.

"It is pleasing to note that, among the American journals that have dealt freely and fully with this vexed question there is one that stands out from its contemporaries on the side of right and fairness. The New York Herald both in its editorial columns and its telegraphic reports from Victoria in British Columbia has always pursued a course of deliberate calmness and judgment. It is the only great daily of the United States that is clear from the charge of exaggeration." The Herald is the only daily in America with which I correspond.

I am Sir, etc.

Haying and Cyclones—Victimized the Stage Robbers Perhaps.

From the Sentinel.]

Ranchers have been busy haying during the past week. They report help scarce.

On Thursday afternoon it looked for a while as if the tail end of the Minnesota-Dakota cyclone was going to be flourished around the valley. A vigorous windstorm followed closely by a heavy thunderstorm was the outcome of the threatening.

A local hotel-keeper complains that has been victimized to the extent of over $900 by parties leaving for green fields and neglecting to settle up for the good time they had here.

Peter Fink, one of the early pioneers of B. C., died at North Bend Friday, at the age of 56 years. He was well known throughout the upper country.

Why the Cariboo stage driver don't carry a pistol is what puzzles the public.

Messrs. Alex. and Hector McLean and Frank Savona returned from a trip over the ranges to the northwest of Kamloops Friday night. They reported having seen two men on foot crossing the mountains, and on learning of the Cariboo stage robbery are convinced that the two men they saw were the robbers.

The thermometer registered 87 deg. in the shade Wednesday.

D. W. Corbin, mining operator and claim holder, has been spending a few weeks in camp. He is talking about commencing work on the North Fork, and no doubt he will make things hum shortly in that quarter.

There is at present at Sproat an Indian woman to whom the Indians attribute the extraordinary age of 150 years. Her sight is still good, and she gets around with the aid of crutches. She is nothing but a living skeleton.

Jas. Brady, a mining expert from Victoria, is pushing work on the Lanark mine, driving a tunnel to tap the lead at a lower level, as well as to get drainage for the workings. Everything connected with present operations is being conducted with good practical judgment.

A meeting was held at Nelson last week, presided over by J. Fred Hume. They decided not to spend money on a wharf, but to devote the entire appropriation to building a wagon road to the Hall mine. Messrs. Hume, Hall and Giffin were appointed a committee to look after the matter.

An old prospector, generally known as "Uncle," came down from Big Bend this week. The Smith Creek Co. are doing well, and Sol Rodman, about a mile above them, on a small stream, is taking out $6 a day. If the expense of getting stuff up to Big Bend did not come so high there would be a boom in placer mining and new diggings opened.

The Bishop of New Westminster and Mrs. Sillitoe, arrived on the train from the west Tuesday morning, and on Wednesday left on the steamer Lytton for the south. They will be absent about a week, making the trip on horseback from Sproat to Nelson and return. This is the first visit of His Lordship to Nelson and is made in the course of his annual tour of visitation to his diocese.

BRITISH COLUMBIA CANNING CO.

The Annual Meeting in London—A Very Satisfactory Report.

From the Canadian Gazette, July 3.]

The second ordinary general meeting of the British Columbia Canning Company Limited, took place on Monday at Winchester House, Old Broad street, Mr. E. Wotton presiding.

The secretary, Mr. B. C. Moss, read the notice calling the meeting, and the report and accounts were taken as read.

The report was as follows: The directors beg to submit to the shareholders a balance sheet, made up to the 31st May, 1890, and are pleased to be able to report satisfactory results of the year's working. The net profits after writing £2000 off property, amount to £11,642 6s. 1d., out of which the dividend on the preference shares to the 31st October, 1889, and an interim dividend of 5 per cent. on the ordinary shares was paid on the 15th November last. The directors now recommend that the dividend on the preference shares be paid up to the 31st of May, and that a further dividend of 5 per cent. with 5 per cent. bonus be declared on the amount paid up on the ordinary shares, all payable on the 15th of July. Out of the remaining profits £2000 has been transferred to the reserve fund and £750 to an insurance fund, leaving £1630 5s. 4d. to be carried forward. It is proposed to form the insurance fund to cover steamers owned by the company against marine and river risks, and so obviate the difficulty hitherto experienced in insuring, and thereby saving to the company the high premiums hitherto paid. The directors report having purchased the property at River's Inlet known as the Victoria Packing Company's property, which they believe will prove to be a valuable acquisition to the Company. This property comprises in addition to commodious cannery premises, a saw-mill, at which all the cases required by the Company will be made, it is believed, at a considerable saving in cost, and with the additional advantage of being thoroughly seasoned. The two canneries, now owned by the Company at River's Inlet, and the saw-mill can all be worked under the superintendence of one manager, therefore considerable economy in the cost of management will be effected. A small steamer for the more efficient working of the Fraser River cannery has been provided. The director retiring in accordance with the articles of association, is Mr. E. Wotton, who, being eligible, offers himself for re-election. It will be necessary for the shareholders to appoint an auditor for the ensuing year. Messrs. Josolyne, Miles and Blow, the retiring auditors, will be proposed for re-election. As it is not found to be practicable to close the books before the 31st May, and in some seasons a rather later date may be necessary, the directors will propose an alteration with regard to the date for holding, in future, the annual general meetings, leaving it to the board to fix the date for holding such meetings.

In moving the adoption of the report the chairman said: "I think you will agree with me that the results of the first year's trading of the company are distinctly satisfactory and encouraging. As regards the proposed amount to be set aside for the insurance fund, I may explain that the company possesses two or three small river steamers, which are used in towing the fishing-boats and for the purposes of the cannery, generally speaking. It is a risk that is very difficult to insure except at very high premiums, and we have thought it better to become our own insurers, and thus save the company the heavy premiums we have been in the habit of paying. You will also observe that we have purchased the property called the Victoria Packing Company. This property is situated on the Rivers Inlet, and almost immediately opposite to our own cannery on the river. It is a large, commodious and well-appointed cannery, and we commence packing from it this present season. Included in the purchase is also a sawmill with about 450 acres of well wooded land, and from this sawmill we are this season producing all the cases required for all our various canneries at a considerably reduced cost to what we have been in the habit of paying. It is a very important matter as regards cases to be sure that they are made of thoroughly seasoned wood, as otherwise the contents are apt to get damaged, and, of course, considerable loss and claims ensue. We shall therefore now be enabled for the future to be perfectly certain of securing a good supply of well-seasoned cases at a very reasonable cost. The amount that we have paid for this property is a sum of £6,065, and I think it will prove to be a very good investment indeed for the company. That includes a small steamer, I may mention, in connection with this matter, that the directors may decide to call up shortly the remainder of the uncalled capital on the ordinary shares, which is 5s a share on about 17,000 shares, so that the whole of the ordinary shares will be then fully paid. We shall, of course, give due and ample notice before the money is required. As regards the past season, the run of fish, as you are probably aware, was extremely heavy in the Fraser River—it may be, in fact, described as unprecedently heavy. The consequence was that a very large catch was secured and sent to the market. Our own cannery on the Fraser river did very well, and at River's Inlet there was also a good supply of fish. The run of fish on the northern rivers was not quite so good, and consequently our canneries at Skeena and Naas were rather under the average. As regards the future I may mention, in confidence, that the prospects are fairly satisfactory. There was, of course, a very large import this season owing to the unusually heavy catch on the Fraser River, but the market seems to have borne the heavy supplies fairly well, and it would appear to indicate that the consumption is increasing. I think, bearing in mind the position of the company, the comparatively small capital on which we have to pay a dividend, the low price at which the various properties were secured, and seeing that all our various canneries are in a high state of efficiency and are conducted in the most economic manner possible—I think we are quite justified in regarding the future with every feeling of confidence and hope. Before I conclude, gentlemen, I should like to say that I think the company are greatly indebted to their commercial agents, Messrs. Josolyne, Miles and Blow, for the care and attention they have shown for the company's interests. These gentlemen have been associated with this industry almost from its commencement—I think for fifteen or twenty years—and their accumulated knowledge and experience have been of very great benefit to the company. Indeed, I think that a considerable portion of the success of the company has been owing to these gentlemen.

The report and accounts were adopted, and the retiring directors and auditors were re-elected, the meeting closing in the usual manner.

THE LAURA MINE.

Mr. Morris Moss Returns With a Sack Full of Gold.

The Laura mine is a hydraulic claim in Rock Creek district, which is owned by a Victoria company, Mr. Morris Moss and Mayor Grant and several others being the principal stockholders. For a year or two previous to this summer the Company's managers have been building a flume, erecting a saw-mill and houses, and getting the hydraulicing plant on the ground and in operation. The claim comprises a mile and a half of ground along the creek, and there for many years—in fact ever since the early days of mining in British Columbia—miners have sought the precious metal with varying success. Employing only the most primitive appliances, good pay has been found in the enormous bank of gravel, and as high as $8 a day to the man was formerly taken out by tunneling on the bedrock. But the ground was finally abandoned on account of the difficulty of working it, and it remained unworked until taken up by the present owners a few years ago. The preliminary work required in hydraulicing having been completed last fall, operations were resumed this summer under the management of Mr. Jensen, a Californian of 20 years' experience in this system of mining. The first clean up from the strippings or upper dirt was made about a week ago, and the result was most satisfactory. Mr. Moss, who returned on Saturday night, having brought back about $1,500. The character of the ground which has been washed being considered—neither the bedrock nor the gravel immediately above having been reached,—the yield is an indication that the claim is extraordinarily rich. The gravel for a depth of eight feet prospects from ten to forty cents a pan, and the general opinion on the ground is that before fall the Laura will go far beyond the most sanguine expectations of the manager and owners.

The quartz mines of Okanagon and Osoyoos look extremely well. Several Spokane men are in the country and are trying to bond claims. The Americans realize the enormous richness of the country, and they are everywhere obtaining the choice locations and the most promising mineral prospects. One party of Spokane investors took out three team loads of quartz to Spokane Falls by way of Wilbur, to be tested.

Mr. Moss returned via Okanagon Valley, a district which, in his opinion, is destined to be the great granary and fruit region of British Columbia. At present, with its waving fields of grain, luxuriant herbage and heavy-weighted fruit trees, it presents a picture "as fair as a garden of the Lord." The average British Columbian, Mr. Moss says, knows little about the wealth of his own province, and he advises a visit to the Okanagon country for those who are inclined to depreciate the future possibilities of the Province.

INDIGNATION MEETING.

A Mass Meeting at Nanaimo Condemns the Mine Owners.

A mass meeting of miners and citizens of Nanaimo and district was held in the Institute Hall, Nanaimo, on Saturday evening last. Mayor Hilbert occupied the chair, and the meeting was addressed by T. Keith, M.P.P., Geo. Campbell and others. Resolutions were unanimously passed condemnatory of the action of Dunsmuir & Sons for evicting the men from their homes.

The situation at Nanaimo remains unchanged. The first evictions were expected to take place to-day, but as all the men will go out quietly, no trouble is anticipated. About five hundred people—men, women and children—are homeless, and all these will be compelled to camp out or seek dwellings in Nanaimo, where every house is already full. The old Methodist church and the Bay View House, an empty hotel, have been secured and will be occupied as temporary residences.

Mayor Oppenheimer of Vancouver has sent a bale of canvas for making tents, and the Nanaimo citizens have subscribed most liberally.

A relief committee takes charge of all donations and sees to their judicious expenditure.

A VISIT TO THE WARSPITE.

An Immense Crowd Throng the Ship on Sunday.

Esquimalt, generally so quiet, was livelier yesterday than it has been for some time past. The presence of six war ships in the harbor, and particularly the fact that the Warspite was there, drew hundreds of people to the little village yesterday, and the street, for there is only one, was packed with vehicles of all kinds going and coming from Victoria. Some people preferred walking, and of course they reaped the benefit of the dust that, although not very bad, was enough to choke one at times. The boatmen were out in force, every craft available at Esquimalt being brought into use to carry the people back and forth to the flagship, as she was the only one that seemed to attract attention, although the tourists who were present took the opportunity to visit the other ships. Hundreds of people must have visited the Warspite, and everyone of them expressed themselves as being highly pleased with that immense piece of iron, and also with the kind manner with which the officers and crew showed them the workings of the guns and all the latest improvements for use in a marine battle. The new style guns, the first on the coast, were particular points of attraction, and one could not spend a better afternoon than one in the big ship. A representative of the TIMES who happened to be among the many visitors, was taken hold of along with his companions by an officer who took great pains to show them every part of the ship from the bunkers and store rooms in the lower hold to the masthead, which place of course the majority declined to inspect. The lower hold, the boiler and engine deck of the vessel, although very interesting, were rather too warm to be comfortable, and after visiting that part of the ship it was pleasant to again reach the main deck and feel the cool breeze that was blowing over the harbor.

George Francis, one of the enterprising boatmen who ply their way between the ships and the landing, had prepared himself for the rush of visitors, and yesterday found him with a boat that would seat thirty at least, and unlike some people who take advantage of a rush to raise the price, Mr. Francis has lowered it from fifty cents for the round trip to twenty-five cents for the same service.

GARDEN PARTIES

In London and in Victoria—Mr. Gladstone and Sunday Traveling.

In the English papers just received we find interesting accounts of garden parties given near London "amid merciless showers of rain," and we often wonder if there would be any end to garden parties in the old country, if weather, such as ours, could be relied upon for a month or two.

As we write, carriages are whirling past and boats are sailing round to Esquimalt crowded with ladies and gentlemen, whose pleasure it is this afternoon, to "wait upon" Mrs. McCallum at Maple Bank, the admiral's house as it was wont to be called, from 3:30 to 7 o'clock. How different is the state of things, as regards weather. Here are notices of three great garden parties, one of Mrs. Benson's, the wife of the head of the Church of England, the Archbishop of Canterbury; one of Mrs. Gladstone, and one of Lady Jersey, and all of these are spoiled by the "inclemency of the weather." Well, Mrs. McCallum has no complaint of that kind to make to-day, for is it not gloriously fine? The fact that Mrs. Gladstone's party was on Saturday night, and that after it Mr. Gladstone travelled up to London to avoid travelling on Sunday, is interesting, as his dislike to Sunday traveling was not generally known before.

The Archbishop of Canterbury and Mrs. Benson received their guests on Saturday afternoon at what was meant to be a garden party, but the rain fell mercilessly and the garden was forsaken. However, this misfortune matters less at Lambeth than at any house in London, for nowhere is there such a spacious suite of reception rooms or such a variety of objects of architectural and antiquarian interest. "There was much humor [illegible] Archbishop Tait in the splendid "guard-room" of Lambeth Palace, he exclaimed, looking round the room: "This is the sort of place which puts one out of conceit with Disestablishment."

The same inclemency of weather destroyed Mrs. Gladstone's garden party at Dollis Hill and seriously affected that given by Lady Jersey at Osterley. After a few hours amusement a deluge came down again, drenching the guests at Sir Kenneth Matheson's concert in Cadogan Square and Lady Ripon's evening party at the new house on Chelsea embankment, for which Lord Ripon has deserted Carleton Gardens. Mr. Gladstone, who makes it an absolute rule not to travel on Sundays, returned to London last night in order to hear the Bishop of Peterborough at St. Margaret's, Westminster, this morning.

This rule of Mr. Gladstone's against Sunday travelling placed him in a rather inconvenient position when at one time the Queen took to inviting him to dine and sleep at Windsor on Saturday night, and did not extend her invitation over Sunday. When this occurred Mr. Gladstone used to remove himself on Sunday from the castle to the deanery, and remain till Monday as the guest of Dean Wellesley. This came to the Queen's ears and a more considerate arrangement was adopted.

KOOTENAY NEWS.

[From the Miner.]

James Rodgers, who owns the finest ranch in Kootenay district, has 60 acres in crop this year, and says that last reports were that the rainfall was so great that irrigation was not necessary.

John McComiskey returned to-day from a ten-day's trip on the north side of the Kootenay. He reports finding float, but was unable to locate the ledge he was looking for—a continuation of the one on which is the Royal Canadian, a gold proposition owned by the French boys. Mr. Comiskey says he took a look at the Queen Victoria, and gives it as his unqualified opinion that that property will be another St. Lawrence-Anaconda if but once in the hands of a strong company.

The committee who have charge of constructing the wagon road from Nelson to the Hall mines met on Wednesday and decided to hire M. S. Davys to survey the route, no other surveyor being in the country. It is stated that Mr. Davys refused to take the job as a contract, and would only undertake it at the rate of $10 a day for his services alone, he to be allowed five assistants. He claimed that, weather permitting, he could locate the route in about 15 days. Work was commenced to-day. As soon as two miles are located actual construction work will begin.

Whitehead, McLean & McKay moved their headquarters camp this week from Sproat to a point about four miles west of the Slocan, the first five miles of their grade on the Columbia and Kootenay Railway being almost completed. It will be ready for the track-layers during the coming week as the trestles are well under way. The next five miles is earth work and will be finished up ahead of contract time—August 15th. In fact these contractors expect to be out of the country early in September. All the trestle and bridge work has been turned over to D. B. Campbell, Genelle Brothers merely furnishing the sawed timber. Mr. Campbell has over 120 men on his pay-roll, and as he is a good bridge man, the completion of the road will not be delayed on his account. Already the piling for the approaches to the Slocan bridge are on the banks at the crossing, and a gang of men under foreman Dolan are taking out timbers for trestles on the Keefer & Co. end of the work. Keefer & Co., after overcoming many difficulties, are making good headway on their end of the line. The first five miles will be turned over within the month. Most of their 14 miles is rock work, and when the line is definitely located they will have a sufficient force on hand to complete it on time. At present they have about 450 white men on the pay-roll, and but 20 Chinese. Monday last a number of dump carts were packed in for use on the earth and loose rock work at Camp 2. There will be no difficulty in getting enough ties for the entire 28 miles from timber close to the right-of-way, but the sawed timber for the bridge across the Kootenay will probably be procured from the mills on Kootenay lake.

Advices from Hot Springs are that Wheeler, McCune & Co., expect hoisting machinery for the Krao in on the next boat and that machinery for the Skyline has been ordered.

The bond on the Queen Victoria, a copper prospect 8 miles west of Nelson, has not been thrown up as currently reported. The bond is held by men connected with the Canadian Pacific, who are merely waiting to learn the result of working tests before making a final decision in the matter.

The Poorman mill continues to pound away on the gold rock from that mine. The net results of ten stamps dropping ten hours a day is about $100 daily in free gold and concentrates.

Reports from the upper country that 15 men are at work running a tunnel on the Lanark mine and 2 on the Maple Leaf. The Cariboo Creek Mining Company are also expected to resume work during the month. These properties are all close to Illecillewaet. It is also reported that a great strike has been made in the Monarch mine at Field, and that an option on the mine has been obtained by the owners of the Revelstone smelter. The Monarch was opened up in the fall and winter of 1888, and 1500 tons of ore shipped from it to the smelter at Vancouver, the smelter being built on purpose to work its ore. The smelter was a failure, owing to the faulty construction and bad management, and has since been sold for scrap-iron. If the Revelstoke smelter people get control of the Monarch and adjoining claims, the smelter will probably be started up in 30 days. It is a complete one in all its appointments.

The Sayward-Davies Lumber Company of Victoria, whose manager in the lakes country is George T. Kane, has all its sawmill plant on the site at Pilot bay, below cape Horn, the Surprise bringing in her boiler on her last trip. Mr. Kane states that the company has a number of the finest timber limits in Kootenay district, all easily accessible by the waters of the lake, which is navigable the year round. The capacity of the mill he states is 25,000 feet a day, and will be sawing timber by August first.

Prof. Macoun, naturalist for the Dominion scientific survey, has been camped near Ainsworth for about a week, examining the flora from the lake level to an altitude of 5,500 feet above the lake. The professor expresses himself as highly pleased with the many and valuable mining properties in the Hot Springs district, and predicts that it will soon become a great mining center.

EIGHT HOURS A DAY.

ELOQUENT SERMON BY RIGHT REV. BISHOP OF VANCOUVER.

Who Declares in Favor of Shorter Hours of Labor for Workingmen—The Dignity of Labor—Religion the Bulwark of the Poor, Etc.

St. Andrew's pro-cathedral (Catholic) was well filled yesterday morning with a thoroughly representative gathering of workingmen. The cause of this unusual assemblage was the announcement that the Rt. Rev. Bishop Lemmens would, in response to the circular issued by the Victoria Trades Assembly, discourse on the very important question which is now agitating the leading men of thought throughout the civilized world as well as the masses—the reduction of the hours of labor. To say that there were three hundred persons present outside of the regular congregation would be a very conservative estimation. The sermon was such as to please even the most radical of workingmen. The Rt. Rev. Bishop, after reading a portion of the Gospel according to St. Paul said:

Beloved Brethren: A few days ago the Victoria Trades Assembly issued a circular to the clergy of this city, asking them to use their influence in promoting the movement for a reduction of the hours of labor. It is the desire of the Assembly that favorable reference be made to this subject in our addresses to the people. I take great pleasure in recommending to your kind consideration and hearty co-operation these righteous aspirations of our workingmen. In what I may say on the subject, I hope you will not expect to find any attempt at solving the great social question between capital and labor. I do not pretend to know, nor do I think anybody knows how that question is to be solved, or whether it can be solved at all satisfactorily without a tremendous subversion of the present order of things. There are, however, some phases of it, which are simple enough, and the adjustment of clashing interests in regard to these is quite attainable, such for instance as the reduction of the hours of labor.

It is very true, as the circular states, that much of the harshness of which the masses complain, is owing to the protraction of the hours of labor beyond the bounds of human endurance. When a man has to work nine or ten hours a day or more, independently of the time he occupies in taking his meals, walking to and from his work and attending to his little concerns, there is no alternative left him but to give the residue of his time to sleep and inactivity, if he would be in a condition to resume his task the next day. There is no margin left for innocent recreation or for the cultivation of the mind. Now, I ask you, what kind of a life is this? Working, eating and sleeping day in, day out! It is the life of of a beast of burden. It is an indignity to force such a life upon a rational being and a Christian. Yet, how many there are right here in our midst who groan under this evil, an evil for the existence of which there is neither necessity nor excuse. We cannot ignore it and it is high time that this injustice and inhumanity be stamped out from civilized society.

In our efforts to further this object, we catholics need only follow the lead of the greatest lights of the church. Her highest dignitaries and best thinkers, from the Pope down, have spoken with no uncertain sounds in favor of the poor and destitute of mankind, especially in regard to the amelioration of the condition of the working classes. Workingmen may therefore rest assured that they will find our people heartily responsive to any movement which is likely to raise the condition of the working classes, to readjust the hours of labor in a manner more suited to the higher needs of rational men, to the age or sex of the laborer, rest on the Lord's day, and in general to eliminate whatever tends to degrade the laborer to the condition of a vile instrument at the expense of his dignity as a man, his morals and his domestic well-being.

The members of the Trades Assembly show their good sense in acknowledging that the successful solution of a matter of this importance will require, besides the wise intervention of the civil authority, the powerful co-operation of religion and the benevolent action of the church. The religious sentiment, indeed, is the only thing that can give authority to law, and the Gospel is the only code containing the principles of true justice and those maxims of mutual charity which should unite all men as children of the same Father and members of the same family.

Religion teaches the employer to respect the dignity of the workman and to treat him with justice and equity. It inculcates in the laborer a feeling of duty and responsibility, and makes him moral, sober, honest and contented. Without these principles of religion society cannot enjoy peace, order and prosperity. I need not tell you that in these times of gigantic strikes and labor troubles which affect whole nations, the world is not in the undisturbed enjoyment of those blessings of peace, order and prosperity. The world is out of joint on the vital question of production and enjoyment. It was no communist, no anarchist, no socialist, but one of the most sagacious conservative publicists who wrote: "Our present state of society is, in many respects, one of the most horrible that has ever existed in the world's history, boundless luxury and self-indulgence at one end of the scale, and at the other a condition of life as cruel as that of a Roman slave, and more degraded than that of a South Sea Islander." It may not strike you that way, my dear friends, when you think only of this our favored city of Victoria, for, thank God, we are singularly free from those horrors, but go to any of the larger cities of the land at least, and see the sights which stare you in the face as you walk the streets of London, and realize the abject poverty, the deep, widespread degradation, physical, moral and mental, surging around the well-appointed homes in which the wealthy classes lead their cultured and commodious lives. Does it not seem to call for vengeance. "The poor you have always with you." True, most true. But poverty is one thing; pauperism another. The pauperism of the age has been decried, and not amiss, as "wretchedness threatens a great power in the public order." A great power indeed, and a power which is rapidly becoming conscious of its strength. It is an undeniable fact that political authority and influence is everywhere passing into the hands of the moneyless masses. Kaiser William seems to have apprehended this truth, and far from despising the danger, is acting on the advice: "Agree with thine adversary quickly, while thou art in the way with him." Our best wishes are with him in the mighty task to which he is dedicating his youthful prowess.

The working men are a class of men that have been alternately venerated and despised, loved and hated; at one time they are regarded by society as a pledge of public safety, at another as a source of danger; now as a principle of vitality, again as an element of dissolution. It is a class whose needs, aspirations and tendencies occupy in a great measure the minds and attention of the politicians, philanthropists and political economists of the day. God be praised, the workingman finds, even in our day, some generous hearts to love him, some who honestly exert themselves to raise him to his true dignity. But, unhappily, he is still surrounded by many enemies, one part of whom oppresses, while the other flatters him, but both unite in endeavoring to make him their victim. His oppressors are those heartless employers of labor who see in the workingman, not a brother but an instrument of production, a machine of flesh and blood, which they make use of or fling aside as it suits their purpose. His flatterers are those who, seeing that they cannot divert his labor to their own advantage, try to seduce him with the opiate of socialistic doctrines. They are for ever talking to him of liberty and equality, emancipation and progress; they propose to make him sovereign, to administer justice in his name and to manage his exchequer, in short, to captivate him, not as true patriots, by good counsels, but as bad citizens to whom the very names of duty and sacrifice are odious. The poor man, finding himself thus despised on the one hand, flattered and deceived on the other, and provoked now to complaints and murmurings, now to rage and angry passions, cries aloud from his heart: Is there, then, no one who loves me, or cares for me? Is there no balm for my wounds, no comfort in my sufferings?

Yes, there is. Only it must not be expected that all the wishes of the workingman can be realized, not even all his legitimate wishes. Many, of course, if they had their wish, would cease to be workingmen altogether. Some here and there happily succeed in bettering their lot so as to become themselves employers of labor; but the great majority will continue to be what they are, their hours of labor may be shortened as they ought to be, many comforts may be secured to them by the enactment of good laws, but yet their condition will always have a degree of harshness, when compared with that of the favored few, which cannot but make it supremely distasteful and burthensome in itself. Who, then, will console the workingman? Who will sweeten the bitterness of his lot? Who heal up his bleeding heart-wounds? There is One who has said, (One who never spoke falsely, and faithfully keeps all His promises): "Come to me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will refresh you." To this end God made man; himself worked as a poor man for thirty years. When he came to be our Redeemer and the Restorer of Society, he came not as a mighty emperor, nor as a great and learned doctor, but as a poor little child, in the humblest guise of suffering poverty, living and working unknown to the world in a carpenter's shop, the ever ready and constant help of his poor working parents. Thus, he, who was the Son of God, before redeeming man, was pleased to win him to truth and raise him to his real dignity, by teaching him that happiness does not consist in luxury and idleness, but is obtainable only through duties faithfully performed and sacrifices readily made. Thus, before he would redeem us, Jesus lived for us, a model of work, of labor, showing us at once its dignity, its virtue, its rewards, its happiness. The very hand which created the world applied itself therein for thirty years, to labor. From that divine contact, what glory is there not reflected on the material touched by the workman's hand? The remembrance of the workshop of Nazareth floats on the river of time through all the centuries, and sheds a divine halo around you, O working man. See, the same God who is held up for the adoration of the world has been with you, espoused your order, made himself your equal! Do not, then, chafe or lament over your lot. No class of society has such striking features of resemblance to God. The rich man cannot say: Like my Saviour, I am rich. Nor can the man of learning say: Christ the Lord honored the school from which I come. Nor the man of power: My God held this office before committing it to me. But you can say, and say it with noble pride: My God himself has done that which I do. Yes, the kingdom of Jesus Christ was a carpenter's shop, His sceptre an instrument of labor. Jesus Christ was a working man.

This alone should suffice to solve the social question, for it should inspire the workingman with patience and resignation and impart strength and consolation, while it should inspire the rich with respect and charity to even the least and poorest of their brethren.

Now, I know there are some, who, when they hear this kind of talk, feel disposed to shrug the shoulder. If there be any such among the workingmen, I would tell them, you must not forget that you owe everything to Jesus Christ and his religion. For, before his time, what was labor? Make those, who would tear you away from Him, tell you what it was. They must confess that it was degrading, dishonorable and slavish, that it was cast forth as an obstacle to happiness and a badge of shame. Plato tells us, that in Greece, he who gave himself to work, was held unworthy of the name of citizen; and Cicero calls laborers people of no account and barbarous! This hatred and degraded view of labor still obtains where Christ and His Gospel are unknown. The Brahmin among the Hindoos would consider himself contaminated if he were to do any labor. The Indians of the plains will do no work themselves, but relegate it to their women whom they treat as slaves, and, my brethren, even in our own midst, in proportion as unbelief prevails and the Christian spirit languishes in our midst, labor is honored in word only, not in deed and in truth, and while men bow and bemoan themselves before the rich, they look askance on the man whose hands are hardened with toil. Do not be deceived by the warm hand shake on the eve of an election; it is your vote which is honored, not your labor. I repeat it, therefore, religion alone begets a genuine love for work, and respect for the workingman. Poverty, according to Catholic teaching, is a more excellent state than wealth, and the poor, where that teaching has leavened the minds and disciplined the hearts of men, have ever been objects of something more than compassion—of reverential affection. But there is more. Religion gives the workingman the best consolation by giving meaning to his work. Dear brethren, work, which is worthy of the name must not be restricted to mere material force, but must also have its moral tendency, it must have the loftier aim of following out the real end of man, the attainment of eternal happiness and the salvation of his soul. Otherwise human acts in labor would be reduced to the level of those of a machine. Where would be the difference between the machinist and his machine. Both unite for the one result, with the only difference that one works for wages and the other does not; the one is an absolute, the other a conditional slave. Now, shall this be the only difference between you? No, religion bursts that bond of slavery which would encircle a free being, and opening up to his gaze a vaster horizon, telling him of another and more abundant remuneration in the splendid and illimitable future, the home of his true destiny. She points out to him Jesus Christ saying: Work, my friend, yet not for the food which perisheth, but for that which endureth forever. "Our present tribulation," says St. Paul, "which is momentary and light, worketh for us above measure exceedingly, an eternal weight of glory."

Looked at in this light, work is divested of all idea of disgrace and burdensomeness. Thus has Christianity changed the ancient badge of slavery into a crown of liberty, intelligence and glory. That political economy, therefore, is in error, which ignores religion, and recognizes only a world of matter. They err who teach the people to recognize no God but gold, no laws but those of self interest. They are false prophets who raise the cry of progress as against religion. Progress, if it be true progress, has its conditions. It must be in accordance with common sense, justice and virtue. If you observe these you cannot go astray. You may be poor, but you will be honest; you may be poor, but not unhappy; and in the hour of death you will be able, with peace and confidence, to call your family around you and make your last will, leaving them the splendid bequest of your good example, and therein the secret of happiness, the love of honest labor.

Let me in conclusion exhort you to cultivate the spirit of work, to be closely united among yourselves and to be sincerely attached to your religious duties. Labor, Union, Religion—this should be the motto of every workingman. Labor will give you a proud independence, union will be your strength, and religion will be your consolation, comfort and dignity.

DOES IT PAY TO ADVERTISE?

Well, That Depends.

It has paid us. On Saturday, the 5th instant, we advertised 20 per cent. off all Clothing. We have been rushing ever since, although some of our customers had to climb over a pile of rubbish about as high as a six-rail fence. If the streets were all full of rubbish it would be better for the town. It's a sign of progress.

OUR SALE STILL CONTINUES. We are bound to clean out our summer stocks. Better lose our profit than carry them over. We have piles of BOYS' SUITS left. We are not selling as many as we expected. Probably on account of the difficulty in getting to our store.

Ladies, it will pay you to go around the block. We mean to clear them out. You SAVE 20 PER CENT. on all Clothing.

CITY POLICE COURT.

(Before Hon. A. N. Richards, Q. C., P. M.)

Jones, the waiter who was arrested on Saturday for using insulting language on the streets, was fined $5.

Three drunks, one of whom bore marks of ill use, paid the regulation fine and left the court wiser but not happy men.

Lizzie Reed, a halfbreed squaw, was charged by an Indian woman with having assaulted her, but the case was not proved and the woman was according dismissed.

WELLINGTON STRIKE.

Subscriptions Received at the "Times" Office for Miners' Benefit.

The unfortunate labor troubles at Wellington will result in the expulsion from the houses owned by the company of about 300 people, men, women and children, many of whom will be compelled to find temporary quarters under canvass. The president of the Miners Union has already asked the people of Victoria and Vancouver for tents in which to house the homeless people. But as a contribution of money will be more easily made by the majority of people and such assistance will be acceptable, the TIMES will receive and forward to the relief committee all donations received. It does not matter on which side the right or the wrong is; the unfortunate people cannot be permitted to suffer.

To Improve the City.

Two large scow loads of sandstone were brought down from Saanich today. One of the loads will be used in the construction of T. B. Hall's new residence to be built near the Dunsmuir castle and the other is for cornices of Turner's new block on Douglas street.

The Elder Ashore.

A telegram was received at noon today stating that the steamer Geo. W. Elder was ashore at Point Wilson near Fort Townsend. It was not believed that she would be floated off before tonight, and would probably have to be lightened. This will probably delay the arrival of the Elder in this port on her way to Alaska, she being advertised to leave here on Wednesday next with excursionists.

Lynch Law in Church.

A prominent member in one of our churches charged one in authority with having slandered him, and asked him through the church court to prove the slander or withdraw it. The court promptly and effectively sat on the complainant by branding him as a slanderer, and turning him out of the church without trial and without evidence, and consequently a small cyclone is on the tapis.

Crushed His Fingers.

The pitcher for the James Bay nine, Mr. F. Jackson, had a nasty accident while on his way to Nanaimo to play there. He got off the train at a stopping place and the cars were in motion when he attempted to regain them. He slipped, and in falling his hands got across the rails and the fingers of the right one were badly crushed. Medical attendance was given at Nanaimo, but it will be a long time before he will be able to curve a ball again.

Important Land Suit.

The long standing case of D. Hoggan, S. Waddington, P. Brodie and E. Hodgson of Nanaimo vs. the E. & N. Railway, was up before the full court this morning, and postponed until Wednesday. The plaintiffs claim that they have a right to pre-empt land under the provisions of the Island Railway Act, in what is locally known as the Newcastle Reserve, contiguous to the corporate limit of the city of Nanaimo.

Customs Changes.

Capt. G. H. Young, who for some time past has been acting as Inspector of Customs for British Columbia, leaves for the east to-morrow morning, he having finished his labors in the Province. Mr. Clute of Westminster, who some time ago received the appointment, has been installed in his new duties by Mr. Young and he will now take charge. Mr. Young, during his short residence in Victoria has made several important changes in the Customs department which will make the work easier, by the addition of three clerks and other changes.

Need a Horse.

The need of a horse to pull No 2 hose reel was very apparent yesterday. The men of the company looked pretty tired after their long run up Fort street in the heat, dragging the heavy reel. After a race like that a man does not feel very fit to go to work putting out a fire, but it has to be done. The sooner a horse is procured the better.

A Burning Island.

Some campers out on an island at the foot of Shawnigan Lake let their camp fire get the better of them and the whole island, which is several acres in extent, was soon burning fiercely. The blaze after a time burned itself out, but had it been in the forests on the shores of the lake, much damage must have been done. Campers cannot be too careful of their fires at this time of year.

The First One.

An alarm from box 54 brought the firemen out yesterday shortly after 1:20 o'clock. The blaze was a grass fire, the first of the season, in a field near Hon. D. W. Higgin's residence on Fort street. No hose was laid, but a plentiful supply of wet sacks were used by the firemen and volunteers in extinguishing the blaze. Mr. H. Dumbleton's new residence, and several other houses were in danger for a time. The cause of the fire is unknown, although it was probably set alight by the careless dropping of a match. The grass is now very dry, and care should be taken that no fire be put near it.

Grass Fires.

The hot weather brings with it the inevitable grass fires, and the best way of dealing with them is a matter of some little doubt, Chief Deasy says, and he ought to know, that throwing water on the fire is of no use unless an almost unlimited supply is at hand with which the whole field where the fire is could be flooded. The water thrown on in buckets full only sets on a small area, and the fire burns right around it. The very best way to fight the grass fire is with wet sacks. The sacks should be dipped in water and then used to beat down the flames. A line of men, properly arranged, can thus check a grass fire even if a high wind is blowing.

MIDSUMMER THEATRICALS.

The ladies and gentlemen who took part in the production of Pygmalion and Galatea a few weeks ago, for the benefit of worthy charities, appreciating the efforts of Mr. Frederick Adderly at that time, to whom, by the way, much of their success in those performances can be attributed, have determined to give that gentleman two benefit performances early next month. The cast for the coming attraction includes the names of all those who did such satisfactory work in Pygmalion and Galatea, and the performances will be given under distinguished patronage so that success and a liberal sum for the beneficiary is assured.

On Monday August 4th, the principal play of the evening will be the laughable farce "The Secret," and on Tuesday August 5th, the comedietta "A Kiss in the Dark," to be followed each night by W. S. Gilbert's fairy comedy, "The Wicked World. There has been much hard study and painstaking rehearsal, and a TIMES representative was assured to-day that these performances would eclipse their previous efforts. Below is given the full cast:
